(By Request.)

Take two cupfuls of bread flour, three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls of shortening, one cup of milk or of milk and water—half and half. The more quickly and deftly the flour is handled the lighter will be the biscuit or bread. Sift the flour with the salt and baking powder. Then, with the tips of the fineers, or with a spatiala, rub in the shortening lightly. Do not rub it too fine. Keep a rather coarse texture. Then quickly stir in the milk, and unless you are in a hurry, let the latter stand for five minutes. In this way the flour has a chance to swell and the batter can be more easily handled. Put it on a floured board; then spread or roll it into shape. If you are making biscuits and want them to brown well, brush them over lightly with milk.
